

MILSA outbound

u^b

u^b UNIVERSITY OF BERN

An intercultural learning program
for University of Bern students studying abroad

MILSA outbound

An intercultural learning program

for University of Bern students studying abroad

Are you going abroad and are interested in developing your intercultural learning and intercultural communication skills?

MILSA outbound is a mentoring program that will support you in your intercultural learning before, during and after your study abroad.

MILSA outbound will

- help you to voice your expectations about your study abroad
- encourage you to reflect on your personal role and experiences and to develop (inter-)cultural self-awareness in conversation with the mentor, with your peers and by writing blog posts for milsablog.ch
- support you in your social and cultural negotiation with the host country
- help you to practice talking about the study abroad experience in view of your future professional life.

Participation is optional and free of charge for University of Bern students. An average knowledge of English is required as the program is taught in English.

Duration of the program is approximately 10 months (including four to six months abroad and term breaks). Please apply for participation by 31 May for the autumn term and by 31 October for the spring term by registering online on milsa.unibe.ch.

To find out more about MILSA, program details, participation and registration, please visit our website milsa.unibe.ch.